American Subscribes $1,000 to Curley Prosperity Fund

Mayor Curley made the following statement in his inaugural address today:

"The Boston of today should be more than a city beautiful, and should throb and vibrate with the hum of industry intermingled with the happy smiles of a contented and prosperous people, whose source of happiness may be traced to profitable employment found not outside of but in Boston."

"I propose during my administration to contribute $1,000 of my salary annually and shall invite similar contributions from one thousand public spirited citizens for the promotion of industry in the manner set forth. And, in my opinion, if a fixed policy of this nature is established and encouraged, it will be possible in the succeeding ten years to add more than fifty million dollars to the realty value of Boston, and provide opportunities for profitable employment to not less than twenty thousand of its inhabitants."

The AMERICAN heartily indorses this plan and adds its 1914 subscription promptly—providing the plan is carried out. The list will, therefore, read:

Mayor Curley.....$1,000

Boston AMERICAN.....$1,000

Who will be the next to subscribe in helping to make Boston a greater city even than it is today?

ARLIN SEARCH IN PROVIDENCE

The hunt for Miss Eleanor Arlin, the missing Brookline typist, shifted to Providence today, following the vain search of the Boy Scout bands for her body through the Chestnut Hill woods.

A woman telephoned the Providence clew to Mrs. Edward A. Rogers, cousin of the missing girl. She told Mrs. Rogers she saw a girl in the Cafe Dreyfus at Providence Saturday night whose description, she believed, coincided with that of Miss Arlin as to appearance and wearing apparel.

Mrs. Rogers left for Providence early today to follow up the new clew.

With suggestions and clews in from every section of New England, the relatives have by no means given up hope that Miss Arlin may yet be found alive. The absence of any motive whatsoever for suicide, so far as they can learn, confirms them in this belief.

GIRL'S MOTHER ILL.

Mrs. Arlin, the girl's mother, at her home in Colebrook, N. H., is sick and heartbroken over the continued absence of her daughter, yet persists in clinging to every hope that offers itself.

"I am ready to pay $500 to the person who will give a clew that will enable us to find my daughter, dead or alive," she said today. "I hope she will be found soon, that this dreadful suspense may be ended."

Mrs. Rogers has been selected by the relatives of the girl to identify any girl who may be produced by claimants for the reward. Mrs. Arlin herself is in no fit condition for the task.

Scores of private detectives are at work on the case of their own volition, but have so far been unable to find anything in the shape of tangible evidence.

SCOUTS END HUNT.

The Boy Scouts gave up their quest reluctantly, after tramping over every inch of available ground. They found all sorts of wearing apparel ranging from shoes to handkerchiefs, but nothing that could be identified as belonging to Miss Arlin.

Scout masters declared today that it will now be necessary to wait until the ice breaks on the Chestnut Hill Reservoir. Hammond's Pond and the large swamp pools before the death theory can be established or refuted in this section.

Relatives of Miss Arlin are still receiving postcards and letters purporting to give clews. A report from Portland, Me., tells of the finding of the body of an unidentified girl there, but does not give a description of her.

"SOLD OUT."

"No more SUNDAY AMERICANS"—Sorry, but you're too late for your SUNDAY AMERICAN—maybe your newsdealer told you this yesterday.

Every copy of yesterday's SUNDAY AMERICAN which came off of the presses was sold.

It was a fine test of the demand for New England's greatest Sunday newspaper—with all the news, all the features, the big Monthly Magazine with its stories by Robert Chambers, Detective W. J. Burns and Frederick A. Kummer, illustrated by Gibson, Christy and Fisher.

MAYOR CURLEY DELIVERING HIS INAUGURAL ADDRESS

'YOU'RE MIXED ON TAXES,' SAYS FITZ TO CURLEY

John F. Fitzgerald, private citizen, today told James M. Curley, new Mayor of Boston, that he, Mayor Curley, was badly mixed in tax figures.

Mr. Fitzgerald told Mayor Curley this on the flower-deck platform of Tremont Temple at the close of the inaugural exercises.

It was not done publicly. It was a stage whisper as the Mayor who WAS clasped the hand of the Mayor who IS.

"A little muddled on figures, Mr. Mayor," said Mr. Fitzgerald.

The former Mayor smiled broadly, took a tighter hold on his walking stick and passed into the ante-room where admirers greeted him and shook his hand.

"What have I got to say about Mayor Curley's criticisms in his inaugural address?" reiterated Mr. Fitzgerald.

"Well, as I just told him in person he was badly off on his figures. Otherwise his address was all right.

"I don't care to get into any controversy with the city's new chief magistrate, but I think some reference should be made to those figures.

"I shall probably issue a statement later making comparisons. Meanwhile, in a general way I might state that the tax returns in Boston for 1913 were probably one-half of 1 per cent. heaped and in 1912 they were about that much ahead. The difference in 1913 would amount to about $130,000.

RYDER IS HELD FOR 'ART' POSES

Jeffry Orne Rider, the Auburndale photographer who is the central figure in the stir among Waltham and Newton parents growing out of charges that he posed girls in the nude in his studio, in the Newton court today faced a charge of having in his possession pictures "tending to corrupt the morals of youth." Rider was held in $500 for a hearing February 16.

Rider entered with his counsel, E. A. H. Emerson of Boston. Attorney Emerson requested a continuance.

"And what do you say, Chief Mitchell?" Judge Bacon asked the Newton chief of police.

"No objection on my part," said the chief.

Judge Bacon then granted Rider a two weeks' continuance.

Rider's arraignment was the result of a search of his studio on Islington road, Auburndale, by Chief Mitchell and Inspector O'Halloran. The photographer accompanied them into the studio and there the chief and inspector O'Halloran gathered up eighteen photographs and negatives. Some of these they said they took from a locked drawer. Chief Mitchell then told Rider he was under arrest.

Court Clerk Sprague, who is a full commissioner, was summoned to the studio. Rider furnished $500 bonds.

The police refused to describe the photographs and negatives they seized. Rider refused to discuss his arrest save to say that the pictures were works of art.

Chief Mitchell's action followed the widespread discussion of the charges which were aired at the time William A. Graham of Waltham filed suit against the photographer alleging that Rider had posed Helen Z. Graham, the Waltham man's daughter, and a sixteen-year-old Waltham High School girl, in the nude. This suit is for $10,000. Since that time other girls have declared they posed for Rider, but not in the nude.

No Fat Men for Salem Police Auto

Nobody in Salem loves a fat man—certainly not City Marshal Lehan. Salem has just bought a new police auto. For years and years "Charlie" Childs and Frank Pellerin have been the drivers for the Salem Police Department. "Charlie" tips the scales at 240 and Frank at 220.

When it came to a tryout for the machine "Charlie" could just wriggle into it. Frank tried it with nearly as much wriggling. Lehan, who was standing by, said he wanted leaner men for the shoffeur job, and then appointed Joseph Doherty and Francis Hitchcock to the places of "Charlie" and Frank.

3,500 IN TREMONT TEMPLE SEE NEW MAYOR SWORN IN

James M. Curley of Roxbury was today inaugurated Mayor of Boston for a four years' term. Thirty-hundred people witnessed the exercises in Tremont Temple, and more than three thousand were turned away because there was no room.

Mayor Curley struck three strong points in his inaugural—economy, publicity, and new business. Concerning these three he had this to say:

THREE CHIEF POINTS OF INAUGURAL.

1—It is my purpose to criticise no predecessor in the office, as Mayor for the present financial condition of Boston, but it is my determination that the policy of extravagance pursued under the administration of the ex-Mayor shall cease.

2—I am a firm believer in the value of publicity, and am equally fearful of the misuse that term is first and deadly placed, so publicity in the city's business will obtain early and current information and decide that degree of efficiency of economy at this time necessary.

3—I propose saving the administration to authorize $1,000 of my salary annually, and shall invite similar contributions from one thousand public spirited citizens, for the promotion of industry.

About these three utterances the remainder of his message, with its detailed recommendations, was hung. He declared he on each was the foundation, and that the large balance now in the treasury was there as the result of local collections of taxes which would ordinarily have been paid in May or June.

The Mayor recommended a depart-

O'HEARN NAMED FOR BUILDING COMMISSIONER

Martin James H. O'Hearn, one of the official aids, removed from office "for the good of the service," Building Commissioner Arthur H. Ryder, a former Municipal chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners, was at once appointed by Mayor Curley as building commissioner.

The Mayor then appointed Patrick O'Hearn, of Dorchester, as building commissioner, subject to the approval of the Civil Service Commission. Mr. O'Hearn will hold the place until O'Hearn is confirmed.

The Building Commissioner and aids, his qualifications and appointments by his assistants in the administration. Over the telephone, Mr. Everett said:

"I did not attend the inauguration exercises. I was not invited. It was the only department head not present."

Finding New Owners For Machinery

In every growing plant certain equipment is constantly being outgrown and its function absorbed by machinery with greater capacity. Yet the old is thoroughly serviceable, even necessary, to smaller manufacturers.

So it is offered through the American's column headed "Machinery," a few pages over, in the "Want Ad" section. Moreover, it finds a buyer almost immediately—for Boston's manufacturers have learned of the vast savings to be thus effected. The buyer, in turn, sells the machine his purchase has replaced to some smaller manufacturer whose needs it may fit.

Thus sort of an endless chain is formed—with profit to both buyer and seller in every transaction. And so the American's "Machinery" column has come to be known as "The Machinery Market of Boston." A market to which entrance is found by way of a "Want Ad," which, when ready, you can leave with any of the American's "Want Ad" Stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, Main Office 89 Summer street, or ment for the purchase of supplies, urged a city planning board to be made up of representatives of the church, the press, labor and capital, declared that new materials should hereafter be used in the street construction because of the change in the nature of the traffic, and pledged himself to an administration free from political log-rolling and devoted to the interests of the people at large.

The inauguration exercises and under way shortly after 10 o'clock. Tremont Temple was chosen rather than Faneuil Hall because of the increased demand for tickets. The hymn, "To Thee, O Country," led by John P. Hesslein, organist of St. Patrick's Church in Roxbury, opened the proceedings. At half-past ten, the members of the City Council and the members-elect proceeded to the platform, where Walter Ballantyne, as the oldest member in term of service, called the meeting to order.

NEW COUNCILLORS TAKE OATH

Thereupon Councillmen John J. Attridge and Walter L. Collins left the platform and went to one of the side rooms, where were assembled Mayor-Elect Curley, Mayor Fitzgerald, Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Supreme Court, Rt. Rev. Monsignor M. J. Splaine, and specially invited guests. The two Councillors escorted the Mayor-elect to the platform, where Mr. Ballantyne delivered to him the gavel.

Chief Jack Donovan then read the formal certificate from the Election Commissioners certifying the Mayor's election, and Monsignor Splaine offered prayer.

Mayor Curley then stepped to the front of the platform and the oath was administered to him by Chief Justice Rugg. He then in turn administered the oath to members of the incoming Council. The new members are Daniel J. McDonald, William Wands and George W. Coleman.

Councilman Ballantyne then introduced the new Mayor, and Mr. Curley began to read his inaugural. Upon the conclusion Mr. Hession led the singing of "Adeste," and the City Council left for City Hall to hold its first formal meeting, when McDonald was chosen president.

Among those on the platform during the exercises were Governor Walsh and members of his staff, Lieutenant-Governor Barry, Monsignor Splaine, Mayor Fitzgerald, members of the City Council, City Messenger, City Clerk former mayors, members of the Governor's Council, Senators and Representatives from Boston, Cardinal O'Connell, Rabbi Fleischer, Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, other clergymen, members of the city departments and other State officials.

REPORT 45,000 FEDERALS DEAD IN WAR TO DATE

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 2.—The astounding fact that secret records on file at the Ministry of War show that 45,000 Federal soldiers have been killed and more than 85,000 wounded in conflicts with rebels since President Madero was driven from office, was revealed today by an attache of the government.

It started that the majority of these killed were soldiers drafted into the army and placed in the advance guard in battle in order that the trained troops might be held in reserve.

No accurate figures for the property loss in Mexico are available but is estimated at more than $150,000,000 in the last nine months.

The White Star rate, now $32, was $28 to $32.

PINDELL NOW DECLINES THE RUSSIAN POST

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Henry M. Pindell of Peoria, Ill., today refused to accept the ambassadorship to Russia. His appointment by President Wilson was confirmed by the Senate last week. Mr. Pindell asserts he has been put in a false light by certain "gross misrepresentations in the public press."

In reply to Pindell's letter of declination, President Wilson says:

"Your letter does great credit to your delicate sense of propriety and serves to increase, if that were possible, my admiration for you and my confidence in your eminent fitness for the mission which you now decline.

"I can but yield to your judgment in the matter because it is clear to me that, feeling as you do, you would not be comfortable or happy in the post. I know your qualities so well and was so anxious to see you at St. Petersburg that I feel a keen disappointment."

ST. ELIZABETH HOSPITAL FUND NEARS $150,000

The total reached at noon leaves slightly more than $50,000 to be raised by Wednesday night when the campaign closes. That the entire $200,000 will be subscribed is believed assured.

A substantial jump in the fund is expected as a result of tonight's performance at the Boston Opera House. Director Russell of the Opera promised the fund committee 50 per cent. of the box office receipts. The program will be "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Il Pagliacci." Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, the noted tenor, will sing in both operas. Carolina White and Alice Nielsen will also appear.

ROBBERS GET $5,000 WORTH OF JEWELRY

The safe in the office of W. C. Williams & Son, jewelry manufacturers, on the top floor at No. 293 Washington street, was ripped open sometime over Sunday, and diamonds and other jewels worth $5,000 stolen.

The robbery was discovered early today by Thomas Scollard, janitor of the building, and Christopher Hill, elevator boy.

The manner of the safe-cracking is a mystery. With some tool which the police admit they are at a loss to describe, the edge of the safe was forced open, the cement filling broken and cracked out, and the combination smashed. Then the door was swung open on its hinges, the wooden interior partitions were battered to pieces, the private drawer of Mr. Williams was forced—and the safe was cleaned of every article of value.

The police have what they believe is a good clew in the story of Janitor Scollard. He said:

"Late Saturday afternoon a young man came in and wanted to rent a room on the top floor next the office of the Williams company. He scarcely looked at the room—accepted it without question—and he was there at 10 o'clock Saturday night when I locked up and went home.

"He or the safe-cracker evidently got into Mr. Williams' office over the transom. The electric lights were undisturbed, and the window blinds were drawn.

"This man was about twenty-two, five feet eight inches tall, weighed perhaps 140 pounds, was of light complexion and wore dark clothes."

400 WORKING WOMEN MARCH ON PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Four hundred working women and girls, representing 3,000,000 members of their sex employed in industries in the United States, gathered here today under the banner of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage and marched to the White House to ask President Wilson to urge speedy legislation for equal suffrage. The delegations included milliners, corset makers, white goods finishers, cigar makers, hosiery, carpet and lace weavers, clerks, stenographers and shirt makers.

In the line that formed about the public library for the march through the heart of the city to the White House were women with gray hair and worn lined faces and young girls who had not begun to show the effects of toil. Some were well dressed and a few even somewhat modishly attired, but the majority wore run-over shoes and cheap, shoddy clothes.

A group of cigar factory girls from Pennsylvania declared they wanted the vote to get higher wages.

"We work ten hours a day and get eighty-three cents a day," said their leader, Miss Reba Freeden. "We cannot live right on that." Rose Schneiderman, survivor of the Triangle fire in New York, said:

"We want to forcibly call President Wilson's attention to the intolerable condition in which women are working—and some not working—in this country. He now is in the White House as the representative of the men of the United States. We also want him to represent the women of the United States."

At intervals along the line were girls carrying banners bearing quotations from President Wilson's book, "New Freedom." Some of the banners were inscribed:

"We have got to humanize industries."

"Give me right and justice and I will undertake to take care of my self."

"I do not care to live in a country called free, even under kind masters."

At the head of the line were three score suffrage workers, including the officers of the Congressional Union.

Many Appendixes Removed Are Normal

"Seventeen per cent. of the appendixes removed at Boston hospitals are shown by autopsies to be normal," declared Dr. D. B. Delano, in speaking in Huntington Chambers.

"Physicians," he continued, "in some of the finest institutions in the country, including Boston, have made grave mistakes in treating their cases."

It's only the innocent leg muff, girls—the very, very latest thing from Paris.

What do you think of it?

Wear it? Certainly. They're selling 'em over in New York; down at Atlantic City, a young lady showed off a pair to the usual boarwalk throng, but in Boston—

Well, the experts say the new leg muffler—beg pardon, muff—isn't making any hit—at least not yet. Instead the Boston women are taking to the new ankle gaiters, made of dimey white lace, with the interstices and all that.

But "pipe" the muff! It is a silk legging lined with fur, plain or decorated on the outside, just as you please. Fur? Ay, there's just the rub. The experts say it's too warm to be desired by women generally, whose fad now is the leanr clothes and the lightest consistent with the law of the land.

But the leg muff may yet become popular. Just see what Cliff Sterrett, the cartoonist, has to say about it in "Polly and her Pals" in today's AMERICAN.

TANGO IN STUDY COURSE, NO ONE PLAYS HOOKEY

The high school pupils in Hartford are not missing a session these days, because Physical Director Allen has introduced the teaching of several tango dance steps and the castle walk into the curriculum of the gymnastic classes.

He finds that the most valuable of the steps are the grape vine and the evolutions of the castle walk, as they tend to strengthen the muscles of the legs, the toes and the back, and help straighten the carriage of the girl pupils.

SHOW NEWSBOYS TANGO.

Joseph Santley, now appearing at the Colonial Theatre, with the assistance of Ruth Randall and Josephine Kerbell, will present a real tango dance at the annual ball of the Boston Newsboys' Protective Union, in Mechanics building tomorrow evening. Mr. Santley and Manager Osborne of the theatre were formerly Boston newsboys.

CALLS TANGO MENACE.

"The lingering dip and the brazen familiarity which I witnessed make the tango a menace to the community. No one who knows me would call me a prude, yet the dancing I witnessed within speaking distance of City Hall is excessive and degrading," the Rev. Frederick A. Wilson, pastor of the West Somerville Universalist Church, told his congregation.

BRINGS TANGO RIVAL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Baronne Hehn De Forster, formerly Miss Sara of Wickoff, N. J., is here to introduce the Hungarian dance "Czardasch" as a rival to the tango. At a concert on the Carmania the baronne created excitement by smoking a cigar.

HITS ANIMAL DANCES.

"Modern ideas for the entertainment of young people should be established in the churches to counteract the use of cigarettes and indulgence in the animal dances," Senator Cox declared at the Melrose Highlands Congregational Church.

TERSE TANGO TALK.

President Leon M. Conwell of the Central Club of Somerville insisted today there was no division of the Central Club over the tango. Some Somerville folk claimed there was.

TANGO RUNS SECOND.

"Pessimism is a worse sign of the times than the tango," the Rev. Ernest S. Meredith told the Third Religious Society in Dorchester.

Seamen Move to End Ship Slavery

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—"Abolish the slave laws! Let American soil become free soil for seamen, as it is for all other men!" This appeal was issued today by Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union, on behalf of the La Follette seamen's bill, now before the House committee on merchant marine and fisheries. Slavery on shipboard he explained as the existing legal status of the enlisted men, who, except in the domestic trade, may be arrested, detained and sent back to their ships or to prison for quitting the service of their employers.

Animal Shortage Drives Up Prices

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—A shortage of 11,000,000 meat animals in January, 1914, as compared with the number in this country in January, 1910, is the reason for the high meat prices assigned by government officials today in a report from the department of agriculture. Beef cattle have increased in value 12.2 per cent, while swine are worth 18.4 per cent more than one year ago.

Labor Unions First in Anti-Trust Plans

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Exemption of labor unions by Congress on the present session from the scope of the Sherman anti-trust law, planned by Senator Kern in the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, jumped to first place in the anti-trust program when the House Judiciary committee unanimously gathered under Henriques at once assumed a new importance.

Appeal to Governor in College Strike

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 2.—An appeal was made to Governor McGovern today to intervene in the strike of the student waiters at the Commons, where 300 University of Wisconsin students take their meals. The waiters organized a union to protest when twenty of their number were dropped from the payroll.

VIOLET THAYER TO BE BRIDE OF JOHN S. PARKER

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Among the most attractive as well as the most accomplished of society debutantes is Mr Joseph Lee, who lives South of Mt Vernon street, who before her marriage was Cecilia Putnam.

Mrs. Smith is well in the forefront of the most prominent of Beacon hill hostesses and her hospitalities always bear the hall mark of originality. Mrs. Smith's two attractive daughters, Miss Frances and Miss Cecilia, are in the schoolroom, but fair to follow in her footsteps. They are both already showing signs of much originality and are artistic in their every way. They are exceedingly popular and will be among the prominent buds of the season's hence.

Pretty Violet Thayer is being more than showered with flowers and felicitations since the announcement of her engagement to John S. Parker. Miss Thayer is the daughter of Mrs. William G. Thayer of Greenough Terrace in the Dutton School and is a favorite guest at the fashionable dances of the fashionable Thayer cousins.

Mr. Parker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Stoddard Parker of Commonwealth avenue and a graduate of Harvard in the class of '12.

Miss Thayer also made her debut two years ago. She is a member of the Sewing Circle for the year and also of the Vincent club. Her brother is William G. Thayer, Jr., and her sister is Margaret Otis Thayer. Among her other relatives are Harrison Gray Otis, an uncle, and Miss Roland Cotton Smith, who is an aunt.

Mr. Parker is a nephew of Charles P. Curtis, Jr., and Mrs. Francis R. Hooper, both of whom are of the brother in William S. Parker of Commonwealth avenue.

Another interesting engagement is that of Miss Ruth Cole Wetherbee, daughter of Mrs. Alfred J. Weiner, who lives at Wellesley Hills and Arthur Peabody Porter, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Jason Porter of Dorchester. Miss Wetherbee is a graduate of Miss Wheelock's school. Mr. Porter, who graduated from the Institute of Technology in '01.

The next meeting of the Sewing Circle League will be held at the home of Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, No. 39 Marlboro street, next Monday afternoon, when Miss Ida M. Cannon, head worker of the Massachusetts General Hospital, will speak. An informal talk will be given by Miss Nina Burnham, whose subject will be "Associated Charities."

AKED REJECTS MIRACULOUS IN CHRIST'S BIRTH

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 2.—At the First Congregational Church, Dr. Charles F. Aked, the pastor announced he would preach that he did not believe in and would not support the doctrine of the miraculous birth of Christ.

As to the record of the miraculous birth of Jesus and to Abed: "If we examine the books of the New Testament, most of the writers of the latter are silent on the subject and even Luke, who tells the story of the birth of Christ, did not speak of it in his gospel. Luke says that he got his information from Mary.

"The first mention we have was Matthew contradicted that. In the New Testament version of the story according to Matthew he says that Christ was of miraculous birth, so that Matthew's gospel was the first written authentication as some to the Apostolic Matthew was a companion of the father of Jesus.

"Mary herself said the same thing that the fate of Jesus and John and James and Paul is good enough for me. In good company I'll be content. These men say nothing about the virgin birth. There is no mention in the gospels of the miraculous birth of Christ. There is no mention in the epistles of Paul. Not brother in Him divine."

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 2.—Miss Lillian Rossie of New York, who says she is an Italian opera singer, and her husband, Frank Nessin, who claims to be a glass worker, are held on charges of taking $1,000 worth of diamonds from a married couple who gave the address the Baltimore name of John Schneider.

A SOUR STOMACH GAS, INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all Stomach distress in five minutes—Time it!

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

BIG RESPONSE OF CHURCHES TO BULGARS' PLEA

Missionary envelopes to secure funds for the starving Bulgarian refugees in the Balkan mountains were distributed to thousands in Greater Boston churches yesterday. This was in response to Queen Elenora's appeal through the Boston AMERICAN and the other Hearst newspapers for aid to relieve the suffering of nearly a half million men, women and children.

Meanwhile contributions continue to swell the AMERICAN'S Bulgarian relief fund, which is being raised in connection with similar funds by the Hearst papers in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The envelopes given to the congregations of Boston churches yesterday were marked: "For the starving Bulgarians." These, with the hearty and generous response from the worshipers, and the donations will serve to increase New England's share in the great campaign to help the hungry multitude in the Balkan mountains.

In New York, at the same time, more than a score of churches made collections by means of envelopes. The amounts will be made known in a day or two. The Greek Catholic congregations will answer the appeal in their synagogues next Sunday. Other New York churches will take up collections next Sunday. In other cities the patriotic call for assistance will be met with donations during this month.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The condition of Devonshire street at the corner of that thoroughfare and Milk street is to be deplored. It is dangerous, to say the least, and needs immediate attention from the street department. The covering of the wooden blocks is worn away and some of the blocks have caved in, making travel exceedingly dangerous to both horse-drawn and motor vehicles.

This particular piece of pavement has been the source of considerable trouble to the street department for several years, but it was never in any worse shape than it is today.

Tomorrow the Massachusetts Highway Commission will give a hearing on the proposed State highway from Boston to Brockton. Several routes have been suggested and at this meeting the supporters of each particular route will have an opportunity to tell their little stories.

* * *

A meeting of the legislative committees of the several automobile associations in this vicinity will be held at the rooms of the Bay State Automobile Association on the Motor Mart, Lenox this evening. This committee consists of one representative of the legislative committee of each of the automobile associations, and the intent is to so handle the legislative work of the year that there will always be some one representative at each and every meeting before the Committee on Roads and Bridges. There are no less than forty automobile bills before the Legislature, and it can readily be seen what a great task the committee has before it.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges will give a most important hearing on Tuesday and another will be accorded the motor cycle measures on Thursday.

Rockefeller Hears the Rich Denounced

CLEVELAND, Feb. 2.—John D. Rockefeller heard the activity of American millionaires denounced as money mad men at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church. "Men who have been chasing the almighty dollar all their lives," declared the Rev. Dr. W. V. Bustard, "are beginning to realize that they have exceeded the speed limit. They are beginning to learn the important lesson of the brotherhood of man. The day has arrived when they must cast aside their avarice and recognize their duty toward their fellow men."

Society Makes Woman a Beggar, Says Swift

"Woman, speaking generally, is an ornamental beggar and society trains her to be such," declared Morrison I. Swift, in speaking in Franklin Union on the subject: "Woman a Professional Beggar." "Your diatribe," he continued, "by reducing woman to a beggar, dependent ever for bread on him and then deifying her."

Such a loan does involve risk, and it is a risk that many of the members of your local "go without" with hardships or privation, but a risk from your point of view not to be taken if your local suffering is to be relieved.

PANAMA, The PIRATES' PARADISE!

No country in the world has ever suffered as much as Panama from the black-handed atrocities of pirates, buccaneers and filibusters. It was early made the shortest route for Cortez, Pizarro and other Spanish robbers in their search for the gold of the Incas.

The Spanish settlers at Panama were harassed for many years by the master pirates of all nations. Most of these were English—the most famous, Sir Francis Drake and Sir Henry Morgan.

Sir Francis Drake robbed, plundered and murdered to satisfy his lust for gold and treasure. In Baden is a statue of Drake celebrating him as the introducer of potatoes into Europe. Plunder and slave trading, not potatoes, engaged his chief attention.

The exploits of Henry Morgan rival the wildest flights of fiction. The sacking and burning of old Panama city with a force of 1,200 men is chief among his many crimes. He plundered the 30,000 inhabitants of every valuable possession and burned what he could not carry away.

Later Morgan forsook his comrades, took the best vessels, sailed away, shared his ill-gotten loot with the British crown, and was later created a baronet. As Sir Henry Morgan this wholesale robber and murderer ended his days in high respectability.

All the pirate stories—all other phases of Panama history, the story of the great canal, present conditions, the purpose and promise of this new enterprise, are fully and accurately set forth in the one authentic book.

Publicity Will Destroy Municipal Graft and Corruption, Says Mayor Curley

"I am a firm believer in the value of publicity, and as sunlight destroys the microbes that lurk in dark and damp places, so, in my opinion, by making the city's business become the property of all, rather than the office holders alone, it will result in the elimination of graft and corruption, and the development of that degree of efficiency and economy at this time imperative."—FROM MAYOR CURLEY'S INAUGURAL.

Here is Mayor James M. Curley's inaugural address, delivered today to three thousand hearers at Tremont Temple:

Gentlemen of the Council:

The present system of election has resulted in the substitution of class rule liberty of action for party dictation, and marks the termination as a controlling factor in municipal campaigns of pledges, promises and obligations invariably redeemed at the expense of the public treasury. The old order, which I trust is happily ended, is largely responsible for our present tax rate and debt, which if permitted to increase during the next quarter of a century as it has in the past would serve as an insuperable barrier to financial investors seeking location for industries so vitally essential to the well-being of the entire people.

The United States Census Reports upon the per capita net debt of eight leading cities for 1902 and 1912 discloses the astonishing fact that Baltimore, whose net debt has nearly doubled in ten years, because of the great holocaust visited upon that city, has nevertheless a debt $25.98 per capita less than is the debt of Boston; that San Francisco, the per capita debt of which in 1902 was $1.72, has today, despite an earthquake and a great conflagration, and an almost complete reconstruction of the municipality, a debt less than one-half as great per capita as is the debt of Boston; that Philadelphia, whose boulevards are perhaps unequalled by any city in the country, has a per capita debt of $15.75 less than the per capita net debt of Boston. The figures are indeed illuminating:

City.	1902	1912	Change from 1902.	Per cent. of change
Chicago	$20.22	$28.62	+$2.40	+9.15
Philadelphia	38.94	60.64	+21.70	+55.73
St. Louis	38.76	33.72	—5.04	—13.00
Baltimore	42.52	81.50	+38.82	+91.29
Cleveland	42.78	79.53	+37.25	+88.10
Buffalo	48.02	57.61	+9.59	+19.97
San Francisco	1.72	61.16	+49.44	+2,874.42
Boston*	93.98	109.42	+10.84	+11.34

*Net debt of the City of Boston of which the County of Suffolk is included in Boston's net debt.

PER CAPITA COST MORE THAN IN NEW YORK.

The per capita cost of maintenance reveals the astonishing fact that the payment by the city of Boston, including our Suffolk County payment, is $3.70 per capita greater for maintenance than the great metropolis of New York, and, in fact, exceeds the per capita cost for maintenance of every leading city in the entire United States; that during the ten-year period 1902-12 the per capita cost of maintenance in St. Louis has been reduced from $23.96 to $19.49, and that Chicago, which today practically embraces a territory many times greater in area than Boston, bears a per capita maintenance cost slightly more than half as great as that of the city of Boston, and the data as prepared by the United States Census Bureau is deserving of consideration:

City.	1902.	1912.
New York	$22.07	$32.73
Chicago	16.97	20.17
Philadelphia	18.90	29.59
St. Louis	23.96	19.49
Baltimore	12.58	19.38
Cleveland	12.65	19.33
Buffalo	13.87	23.55
San Francisco	16.86	24.48
Boston	34.40	36.43

N. B.—Boston's payments include those of Suffolk County.

I believe in justice to myself and those men responsible for my election as Mayor that the public should be fully informed as to the conditions of the municipal treasury, which in 1909-10 contained at the end of the year unappropriated cash amounting to $765,376.61; in 1910-11, $1,488,852.32; 1911-12, $1,002,248.42; in 1912-13, $557,237.47, and today, the year 1913-14, about $500,000. But it must be understood that the unappropriated cash now in the treasury in all probability is there in consequence of payments upon outstanding taxes by persons who, through fear that their property might be sold for unpaid taxes, have within the past ten days made payments that under ordinary conditions would not be in the treasury until April or May.

BOSTON SHOULD VIBRATE WITH HUM OF INDUSTRY.

It is not my purpose to present these facts either as a criticism or condemnation, but it is apparent to me as it must be to every citizen that if it had not been for the extraordinary effort to induce the payment of taxes in the closing days of the present year I would have found the public treasury absolutely without a dollar upon taking office.

The wisdom of those honored men who have preceded me in the office of Mayor in developing a park system, which today is a source of health, pleasure and pride to the community, is worthy of praise.

The Boston of today, however, should be more than a city beautiful, and should throb and vibrate with the hum of industry intermingled with the happy smiles of a contented and prosperous people, whose source of happiness may be traced to profitable employment found not outside of but in Boston.

Every city in the country is today straining to develop industry, and we should be no laggard in this all-important work.

The imperative need of promoting the industrial life of the municipality warrants the public-spirited citizenship of Boston in making a sacrifice for the good of the people. The industrial development of neighboring cities and towns in Massachusetts, where the supply of skilled and unskilled labor is less than can be found in Boston, despite the fact that the tax rate in the several cities and towns in excess of Boston's tax rate in most cases by more than 12 per cent., has been largely due to the fact that realty values adjacent to railroads are lower than obtain in Boston.

In my opinion the tender of a site with a railroad siding without cost to manufacturers agreeing to locate in Boston would be sufficient to offset the disadvantage at present confronting the industrial growth of the city.

I propose during my administration to contribute $1,000 of my salary annually and shall invite similar contributions from one thousand public-spirited citizens for the promotion of industry in the manner above set forth. And in my opinion a fixed policy of this nature is established and encouraged, it will be possible in the succeeding ten years to add more than fifty million dollars to the realty value of Boston, and provide opportunities for profitable employment to not less than twenty thousand of its inhabitants.

The imperative need of a central purchasing department, through which supplies shall be contracted for, must be apparent to every citizen. Supplies now required for the various departments of this municipality are purchased in retail rather than wholesale quantities and at retail rather than wholesale prices.

MONTHLY CONFERENCE ON MUNICIPAL PLANNING.

Failure to take advantage of seasonable purchasing invariably results in payment of excessive price for commodities in general. The adoption of a modern system of auditing, through which bills may be discounted in ten days or less, thereby enabling the city to enjoy and receive an advantage common to every business concern, namely, cash discounts on ten-day payments, would result in a considerable saving to the taxpayers.

I therefore recommend such legislation as will result in the purchase of all supplies through the supply department for every municipality, that advantage be taken of seasonable purchasing and cash discounts, to the end that the present archaic and grossly wasteful system may end.

A monthly conference on city planning, to be participated in by committees representing the church, including every denomination, the press, a representative of each daily newspaper, capital, a representative of each leading industry, and labor, a representative of each of the larger labor organizations, to plan a policy constructive in character and anticipating twenty or more years' growth in our municipal life, is necessary. I am a firm believer in the value of publicity, and as sunlight destroys the microbes that lurk in dark and damp places, so, in my opinion, by making the city's business become the property of all, rather than the office-holders alone, it will result in the elimination of graft and corruption and the development of that degree of efficiency and economy at this time imperative. The combined brain power of these men, all of whom are dependent upon the prosperity of the municipality, should make easy of solution those problems that are most difficult to solve, namely, increasing debt, increasing tax rate, increased demands for public improvements and failure to progress rapidly along industrial, mercantile and commercial lines. A commission of this character created twenty years ago would have been sufficiently powerful to prevent the adoption of our present unsightly, and from a property standpoint injurious, elevated system and our short-sighted and wholly inadequate system of tunnels and subways.

"TREASURY NOT TO PAY ANY POLITICAL DEBTS."

The gross debt of the city ten years ago was $88,149,106, and today is $120,325,581.01, and upon this vast sum, which ten years ago represented an interest charge, including interest on metropolitan assessments, of $4,500,848, we today are compelling to pay an interest charge of $6,168,853. When one considers that amount now paid in interest annually on outstanding indebtedness represents the equivalent of the taxation collected on property valued at $255,654,245, the need of a City Planning Conference that will devise ways and means of providing for pressing and legitimate needs, while presenting a remedy for our present financial ills, must be apparent.

It is not my purpose to criticise my predecessor in the office of Mayor for the present financial condition of Boston, but it is my determination that the policy of discharging political debts through the medium of the city treasury shall cease.

The pay rolls in 1905 and 1906 were $12,208,742.64 for all city departments, and the pay rolls for 1913 and 1914 will total $18,907,768.33 for all departments, and this tremendous increase, for which I am in nowise responsible, calls for the exercise of economy and efficiency in a most pronounced degree.

I assume that the men selected to serve as members of the Conference on City Planning, all of whom are leaders in their several walks of life, will render a great service to myself and those who may succeed me in determining the line of demarcation where humane and just treatment ends and where profligate and unjustifiable expenditure begins in the matter of wages paid men in the service of the city.

I believe in justice to the taxpayers and to the men in charge of the various municipal departments that in November of each year all requests and recommendations for salary increases for the ensuing year should be submitted in the departmental estimates, and that changes in salaries other than those contained in the budget shall not be allowed or considered during the year. The adoption of this system, coupled with general equalization of salaries, would result in the fullest possible measure of justice to men in the city service and the substitution of merit for political favor.

The necessity for promoting the highest efficiency in the various branches of the municipality's activities merits serious thought upon the part of every citizen.

It has been my observation that the efficiency of men in the Sewer Service at the end of ten years of service is not infrequently impaired at least 20 per cent. largely through the exacting character of the work performed by them and the exposure incidental thereto, resulting largely in diseases which cause great suffering.

In my opinion when additional men are required for other branches of the city service, transfers should be made from men in the Sewer Service, and that all men hereafter appointed to the city service as laborers should work not in excess of five years in the Sewer Service; at the expiration of five years be transferred to the Sanitary Service; at the expiration of five years in this service be transferred to the Street Cleaning Service, at the expiration of five years in this service be transferred to the Paving or Water Services and at the expiration of five years in these services be transferred to the department of Park and Recreation.

I would further urge that hereafter positions as watchmen, sidemen, gardens, storekeeper or similar positions not requiring excessive labor be filled through appointment of men who have been crippled in the service or become so advanced in years as to render it impossible for them to do as much work as younger men.

The present wage and pension system warrants the belief that an honest and a merit system can be adopted through which increases in pension and a merit system can be adopted through which increases in pension force will be unnecessary, and such reduction in inspection force as may result from resignations, transfers or otherwise should remain unfilled.

The change in our traffic system occasioned by the substitution of motor-driven vehicles for those drawn by horses renders necessary a change in our system of street construction from macadam and telford to smooth street surfacing more durable and the maintenance of which will be less expensive. The importance of this addition, rendered almost impossible for pedestrians. In my opinion a conference of engineers should be called to determine the most durable and economic material and method of street construction for the future.

The failure of our water and sewerage service to adequately meet the requirements occasioned by increased population in various sections of our city is a problem, the solution of which at an early date is most imperative.

The abolition of the Parental School at West Roxbury and the correctional institutions at Rainsford Island, where boys are committed for truancy or misdemeanors, should for the welfare of the community at once be undertaken. A change from the present system and the substitution of a farming out policy would protect the boy from the contamination of older lads than himself more versed in criminality and save him to society and a useful future, and in addition represent a considerable saving to the municipality.

Municipal experts today are unanimous in the opinion that direct purchase is a fallacy, and much being the care for the promotion of economy and efficiency, the adoption of methods of segregation should be adopted which I have recommended. The adoption of this system coupled with the more frequent, though not necessarily necessary, further increase in the number of officers now required for the supervision of these men and bring about a reduction in the number of municipal institutions.

The present system of municipal election, with the municipal officer at the mercy of the caucus, is undesirable, and the time is ripe for a change in the present law, demands a change.

In my opinion the time has arrived when the electorate and the Commission of expense merits the holding of such election upon the same day as a general election.

A bill of this character presented to the Legislature at an early day would appear advisable, and in my opinion would be to the benefit to all and in addition result in a reduction of expense in the conduct of the election.

SPECIAL PRIVILEGE MUST BE DESTROYED.

The George F. Parkman bequest, unless present tendencies are checked, serve a purpose other than that intended by the donor.

The use of the income from the fund should hereafter be applied strictly to the purposes originally set forth if so utilized will prove the blessing to all intended by the donor.

Special privilege in any form is objectionable, and the removal at this cancer from the body politic must be undertaken at once, since the welfare of the entire community is paramount to the wishes or welfare of any particular element of the community.

From time to time during my administration, as necessity requires, it is my purpose to depart from the custom that has obtained in the past and appear before your honorable body and present for your consideration my views upon such matters as in my opinion may be the welfare of the municipality in a business way. It is my purpose, gentlemen of the Council, to administer the affairs of the municipality in a business, reasonable, just, efficient and constructive manner, and in this work I solicit your co-operation and that of every citizen interested in the welfare of the city.

LARGEST BOOK LOWEST PRICE

But Size and Price by No Means Convey True Value of Rare Contents.

The time-worn motto of "Quick sales and small profits" would aptly apply to the distribution of "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose" were it not self-evident that profits are without consideration in this transaction. The quick sales, however, are in a greater part responsible for inducing the publishers to distribute these books solely through newspapers. They are not sold at stores, otherwise a profit would of necessity need to be provided for, and, with other usual trade conditions added, $4 would be a comparatively low price to ask for such a volume. Daily papers throughout the country are making this great distribution for the benefit of their readers, which explains why it is put out at the mere cost of distribution.

This is a great, big, beautiful book, double the dimensions of the usual size novel, but the size, no more than the price, will convey the great value of the contents. The author, Willis J. Abbot, spent many months in Panama studying the conditions of the great work, as well as the country and the people. The result is this complete story of the canal, setting forth its history, purpose and promise, a book that should be in the hands of every man, woman and child that wishes to advance.

THE AMERICAN presents this book on the popular plan explained elsewhere in this issue. Six certificates and the small expense amount named therein are all that are required. Present your certificates without delay.

PHAIR'S SPICY COMMENT ON SPORTING TOPICS OF THE DAY AND NEWS OF THE BOWLERS

WALTER CAMP DISCUSSES PROPOSED RULE CHANGES

Foremost Football Authority Explains the Revisions Which Have Been Suggested for the Game of Football in 1914.

In anticipation of the annual meeting of the Football Rules Committee, which will be held in a few days, Walter Camp, the foremost of all football authorities, is discussing all the changes in the rules that have been proposed, expressly for the Boston AMERICAN. Herewith is the second installment of his comment.

By WALTER CAMP.

THERE is going to be a great deal of talk about changing the forward pass—about limiting it by one school and increasing it by another.

Several make the contention that it is too severe a penalty to lose the ball when a forward pass goes to the ground in the end zone. Others claim that some teams throw the forward pass in preference to kicking the ball; that is, throwing it so that it crosses the side line and goes out of bounds, thus gaining with more accuracy the distance of a kick and preventing entirely the opponents from running the ball back.

Suppose this is so. It takes a certain amount of accuracy to put the ball out of bounds at the proper place and distance, and there is nothing unfair about the play, nor is there any reason why it should not be used.

The most serious contention regarding the forward pass is one that came before the Rules Committee last year, namely, the intentional throwing the ball to the ground when the would-be passer is prevented from getting off his pass, thus turning the play into an incompleted pass, and instead of losing the distance that the man has been forced back, the ball is returned to the place where it was put in play at the expense of a down.

It looks as if it would be reasonable to rule against this play, but, on the other hand, the effect of ruling against it should be pretty carefully considered. The temptation to try a forward pass is undoubtedly increased by this method of protecting it from becoming a serious loss; hence the rule as it is now encourages forward passing.

Again, it is going to be somewhat difficult to word a rule that will do exactly what is intended in preventing this kind of a play and yet not be misconstrued under other conditions. It will also be probably a greater burden on the officials to tell whether it was a prevented forward pass or a fumble.

GOAL AFTER TOUCHDOWN IS A PROBLEM AGAIN.

WE shall also hear again undoubtedly from those who wish to line the field up into certain zones of scoring or zones of playing, making it count a point to advance to the thirty-yard line and some other point to advance to the twenty-yard line, and so on.

This is an annually recurring proposition. The same is true of dividing the field into spaces for the purposes of play, so that the men must stand in a certain square. These are interesting in the study of games, but are not likely to be seriously considered by the Rules Committee and hence can be passed over lightly.

For something like fifteen years, a discussion has waxed and waned as to allowing a man to kick a goal from a touchdown. Five or six years ago it was proposed that instead of a protection offered him for his free kick, he should be obliged to kick it by drop kick or kick from placement behind the line of scrimmage.

Those in favor of this proposition say that it is much more of a team play and that every play in football ought to be a team play; then the opponents say that you forget that a good many things are not team play in football and that a drop kicker has plenty of advantage now as an individual player and you should multiply that advantage by giving the team who has the drop kicker a greater opportunity to turn goals into touchdowns after the touchdown has been made.

Furthermore, plenty of players are familiar with the fact that it is a very delicate thing in a goal from scrimmage for officials to rule on holding in the line or blocking back of the line, and this difficulty would be multiplied once more.

The third and final installment of Walter Camp's discussion of proposed changes in the football rules will be published in the Boston AMERICAN tomorrow.

Walsh Strengthens B. C. Relay Team

After an enforced absence during the past two weeks, due to preparation for the mid-year examinations, track practice will be resumed today at Boston College, with a much larger number of candidates. The relay team, which walked away from Worcester Tech last Saturday at the I. A. A. A. games, will be strengthened by the appearance of "Husky" Walsh, the star quarterman, who has been suffering from a weak ankle.

Manager "Bill" Desmond is arranging details for the big B. C. A. A. meet, the date of which will be announced in a few days, and which will probably be held in Mechanics building.

School Notes

Athletic Advisor Mosier of Worcester Academy has arranged a very hard schedule for the baseball team. It includes games with Andover, Exeter, Harvard, Brown and Dartmouth Freshmen. The schedule follows:

April 18, Monson Academy at Worcester; April 22, Worcester Tech at Worcester; April 25, Millbrook School at Concord; April 29, Taverner Academy at Worcester.

May 2, Brown Freshmen at Worcester; May 9, Harvard Freshmen at Worcester; May 13, Phillips School at Pomfret, Ct.; May 16, Sterling Field Y. M. C. A. College at Springfield; May 20, Williston Academy at Worcester; May 23, Cushing Academy at Ashburnham; May 26, Exeter Academy at Exeter; May 30, Dartmouth Freshmen at Worcester (morning).

A schedule of games has been drawn up for the southeastern Massachusetts High School Athletic League, comprising the Brockton and New Bedford High Schools and the Durfee High School of Fall River. It is as follows: May 19—Fall River at New Bedford, 3:45; 21—Brockton at Fall River, 3:45; 21—New Bedford at Brockton, 3:45; June 2—New Bedford at Fall River, 3:45; 4—Fall River at Brockton, 3:45; 6—Brockton at New Bedford.

Plan Racing Dates for Cup Defenders

Owners and managers of the three boats for the defence of the America cup, now under construction at Nepousset, Bristol, R. I., and Bath, Me., will meet in New York this week to discuss and probably draw up a racing schedule for the season. It is expected that the racing will begin in June, as the yachts will be ready by the middle of May.

BOWLING FACTS AND COMMENT

The tandem match between the Procter-Walsh and Clerkspoint-Miller teams scheduled for next week still keeps five. It appears now that the area men to have posted their forfeits last week so that they rallied to-day.

City League "fans" are looking forth with interest to the match between Chantry and Berkman scheduled for the Bowdoin alleys next Wednesday night. These teams are the leaders in the league circuit, Chantry having the better of dark Steele's rollers by a margin of a few points.

Followers of the K. of C. League are witnessing a characteristic race. The Mt. Benedict and Holham outfits are tied for first place, with Pere Marquette trailing but two points behind.

The Pilgrim Irving Club is anxiously awaiting the Dorchester club to accept its challenge to determine the bowling championship of the district clubs.

It is reported that a number of the stars in the City League have turned up with the Elwell Whist team for next season.

Frank Alexander, formerly identified with the old Chase Alleys on Kneeland street, has left to join the Elks' team, and it will be long, however, before Phil will be able to equal Alex's work again.

The bowling of Frank Alexander is increasing in startling fast, and he is now the leading bowler of those engaged in the evening leagues.

A query is going the rounds in the Interstate League as to what has become of Stewart. He has not been seen at the last few sets of matches at that league.

Those on the inside say Owen Hines of the Revere Whist team will be seen soon wearing an Elks' emblem on his watchcharm, if his cards run right.

Sam Pugh has either got to give up the ninth hundred mark or else he is going to have a change of luck. Sam was right on with the leaders in the early part of the season but now he can't seem to connect as frequently and as a result is not figured in the leading number.

Nonpareil has a team also in the Newton academic series. Homework, which is tied for first place, can a bowling better away.

Plan Fifth Place in College Meet Events.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—With the purpose of increasing the desire for participation in competition and encouraging keener interest and enthusiasm for athletics among collegiate students, several important amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletics of America will be introduced at the annual meeting of that organization in this city on Saturday, February 28.

The most important change suggested will be to add a fifth place in the finish of each event in awarding the championship cup for the annual track and field meeting.

Junior Holy Name Five Quits League

Only four teams now remain in the N. E. A. A. U. Basketball League, the Junior Holy Name five of Lynn having severed its connection with the organization at the end of last week's schedule. The Lynn boys contend that they are too light to contest with their heavier opponents. The revised schedule for the remainder of the season follows:

February 4, St. Mary's C. A. A., Cambridge; at St. Joseph's C. A. A., at West Somerville; St. Alphonsus A. A., at St. Mary's C. A. A., at Quincy; 6, Quincy A. A., at St. Mary's C. A. A., Cambridge; February 7, St. Joseph's C. A. A., at St. Alphonsus A. A.; February 9, Quincy A. A., at St. Joseph's C. A. A.; February 12, St. Mary's C. A. A., at Quincy A. A.; February 13, at Young's A. A., at St. Alphonsus A. A.; February 16, St. Joseph's C. A. A., at St. Mary's C. A. A.; February 20, St. Alphonsus A. A., at St. Joseph's C. A. A.

Connie Mack to Aid Browns and Naps

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 2.—President Ban Johnson and Connie Mack, while here last week, devised a way to strengthen the Cleveland and St. Louis American teams in case the raids made on the two teams by the Federals go by. Mack has several players he could dispense with and Cleveland needs pitchers now that Blanding, Kahler and Falkenberg have jumped.

Mack can supply that need, and it is believed that Johnson has induced him to change himself to do so. The same position applies to St. Louis, which is a rather weak sister now, to say the least.

Plan to Improve Soccer Football

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—Dr. G. Randolph Manning of New York city, president of the United States of America Football Association, addressed a meeting here to aid soccer football on topics which appear to be the most important just now—organization of State associations, proper regulation of professionalism, stricter application of the rules on amateurism, instruction of soccer football in the public schools and colleges and in the army and navy, and preparations for the dispatch of a representative national team to the Olympic games at Berlin in 1916.

Over 1,000 Dogs in Eastern Club Show

Over 1,000 dogs of all breeds and all descriptions have been entered in the annual show of the Eastern Dog Club, which is to be held in Mechanics building, February 17 to 20, and which promises to be the greatest in the history of that organization. Thirty-six dogs, among which are numbered some of the most prominent canines in the country, will represent the Vickery kennel of Chicago. This kennel is owned partly by Mrs. A. V. Crawford, a Chicago society woman.

SALEM LIFTS THE BOXING LID ONCE AGAIN; BOSTON BOYS TO CLASH IN THE MAIN BOUT

DUFFY BATTLES ALGER IN BOUT AT SALEM CLUB

By JACK CONWAY.

THE boxing lid will be lifted in Salem tonight when George Alger, the skilful Cambridge lightweight, and Freddy Duffy of Jamaica Plain clash in a twelve-round bout between the North Shore A. A. This club has been conducting athletic events for three months and has decided to hold ring tussles.

There are a number of reformers in Salem who made an attempt to stop this evening's show. Mayor Hurley, however, refused to interfere, as he is desirous of finding out whether the new club is going to hold its shows within the law.

Johnny Mooney, who is matchmaker of the North Shore A. A., declared today that only members would be permitted to witness the bouts and that no tickets would be sold at the door.

Duffy and Alger should put up an interesting whirl, as both men are fast, shifty boxers. They met at the Central Club in the West End two years ago and furnished the "fans" with plenty of action. The bout tonight will be refereed by Dick Fleming of Marblehead.

Three six-round preliminary bouts have also been arranged. The preliminary card is as follows: Patsy Green of Cambridge vs. Joe McGovern of Salem, bantamweight; Joe Tom Durrie of Cambridge vs. Tommy McFarland of Boston, featherweight class, and Dave Powers of Malden vs. Billy Burke of Lynn, welterweight class.

TOMMY "YOUNG" LOUGHREY, the veteran Philadelphia middleweight, who has exchanged blows with many of the world's leading 154-pound boxers, will be back in our midst this week. Loughrey is scheduled to meet Joe Chick of Gloucester in a fifteen-round bout before the Marblehills A. C. in Rhode Island Wednesday night. The men will enter the ring at catchweights.

Chick fought his last two bouts at 146 pounds. Eddie Mack, manager of the Gloucester fighter, declares that Chick is not able to make this weight and still be able to travel at a fast pace for fifteen rounds. Therefore Joe will box at catchweights in the future.

Chick recently fought Frank Loughrey, brother of Tommy, in a fifteen-round go at Norfolk, Va., before ville Club. Loughrey was awarded the decision, but Chick asserts that he will even up matters by outpunishing Frank's brother Wednesday.

LAWRENCE boxing "fans" should also witness an interesting bout this week when Joe Eagan of South Boston meets "Young" Jasper, also of North End welterweight, before the Unity Club Thursday evening. Both men are well known to Lawrence "fans." Eagan fought several hard bouts with Steve Kennedy in Lawrence. Winner must fight Joe Gelfand or Jasper he will hurl a challenge at the Lawrence boxer.

TOMMY BURNS, former heavyweight champion of the world, is accused of engaging in a "fixed" bout. Burns knocked out a young man by the name of Brant in Taft, Cal. the other night and it is stated that Brant is none other than one of Burns' clerks in his Calgary haberdashery. It is claimed that the bout was arranged in order to give Burns a start in his "come back" campaign. Brant was no match for Tommy, who is almost fifty pounds overweight, and was knocked out in four rounds.

AD WOLGAST is in big demand by boxing promoters since he "came back" in his bout with Joe Rivers in Milwaukee. Wolgast will battle Charley White in Milwaukee on February 22, while he also has agreed to perform on the Coast and in New Orleans. The New Orleans people are anxious to secure the Michigan lightweight to meet Joe Mandot, while Jim Coffroth, the San Francisco promoter, is desirous of signing Ad with the winner of the "go" between Willie Ritchie and Tommy Murphy which is scheduled to take place in San Francisco on April 19.

WOLGAST, however, does not intend to sign for any more bouts until after his encounter with White. He realizes that he will have to be at his best in order to win from the Chicago lightweight. Wolgast and White have agreed to make 135 pounds at 6 o'clock for their battle, which proves that there are still a few real lightweights in the country.

Gillespie Leads in Pool Tournament

The standing at the end of the first week of the contestants in the New England pool championship tournament at the White Bear room is as follows:

	W.	L.
Gillespie	2	0
Unne	2	0
Wood	1	0
Blazed	1	2
Ingraham	1	2
Ryder	0	2
Lemay	0	2

The players for this evening are Son Ryder of Salem and Charles Blakely of Waltham.

Irish-Americans Hurl Defi at B. A. A. Seven

The Irish-American A. C. hockey is anxiously awaiting a reply from the B. A. A. in regard to their challenge for a series of games. So far, it is said, the Unicorn ice men have seen unwilling to talk hockey with the new club. The wearers of the winged shield are willing to meet the B. A. A. in open on Franklin Field or in the Harvard Stadium, as the latter may choose.

RINGSIDE'S
Boxing Chatter

GILBERT GALLANT, the popular little Chelsea boxer, certainly made good in his first ring battle in California. Gallant's twenty-round draw with Frankie Burns stamps him as one of the foremost lightweights in the country.

ACCORDING to "Uncle Bill" Vaughton's account of the bout Gallant was greatly handicapped by a bad eye, which bothered him throughout the contest. If Gallant's optics had been in perfect condition, he would probably have bested the Coast youth.

GALLANT'S rapid rise in the ring game is a great tribute to the managerial ability of Alex Mcbean. Mcbean took charge of Gallant's business affairs when the Malden youth was boxing third raters in New England rings. Inside of two years he has made him one of the best "drawing" in the lightweight division.

THE Chelsea boy's success should be an example to those boxers who believe that they are wise enough to fight and also to make their own matches.

AD WOLGAST declares that "Kid" Kenneth, who knocked out Arthur Pelky, is one of the greatest heavyweights in the world. It will be almost impossible for Kenneth to meet Wolgast within the next few months, as Ad has signed with the Milwaukee boxing promoters for a number of bouts. Wolgast is one of our best little boy fighters.

"KID" LEWIS, the English featherweight champion, is planning to invade this country. If Lewis is not a better boxer for his weight than Hoodmaker Wells is for his, he should be acting wisely if he remained on the other side of the Atlantic.

GEORGE CHIP, the Newcastle miner, will be unable to box for several weeks on account of an injury he received to one of his hands while fighting Joe Borrell in Philadelphia.

BORRELL will sail for Europe Wednesday. The Quaker has several matches in view in the Old World and should make a creditable showing.

FEDERALS DON'T EXPECT TO MAKE MONEY IN 1914

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—President James A. Gilmore of the Federal League today gave out an interview indicating that the Federals are prepared for a long fight and that they neither expect to make money in 1914 nor to go broke.

President Gilmore said:

"The organized baseball people are figuring that we expect to make a barrel of money in 1914 and that we will go broke if we don't. That's where they are mistaken. We aren't looking forward to 1914 as a profitable season. It's to be more in the nature of an advertising year. This season, one in which we hope to make the people acquainted with our names. In 1915 it will be something different. The fans will know what we've got—that we are a dependable league and will keep them coming to our parks.

EVEN BREAK SATISFACTORY.

"We've aren't sparring on making money in 1914 or even breaking even, but whether we make money or lose money in 1914 doesn't matter so much, but we have the reserve funds to carry us through two or three profitless seasons if necessary.

"Already we have signed up about thirty major leaguers, and we've grabbed off thirty others from the class AA minor league teams. In addition to these men we have 100 players on our rosters who are real stars, men who will compare favorably in the big league departments with any of the best in the National and American leagues.

"Some people are wondering why we have gone after the older players—why we haven't gone after the younger stars of the big leagues. There are two reasons for this. One is that we are not going after players who are under contract just now, but only after those men whose contracts have expired and who are beyond the reserve clause. The second reason is a deeper one—and one which the public up to now has not quite figured out.

WANT EXPERIENCED MEN.

"We want old, experienced players at the heads of our teams so that they may teach our younger players the tricks of the game. Where can you find a better teacher of pitchers than Mordecai Brown? Where is there a better infielder than Joe Tinker? Tinker's game is true about Knabe, Stovall and some of the others.

"Give our youngsters one year under such teachers, Finder, Knabe and others of that kind and they will round into some of the greatest players in the game."

Report Moseley Was Signed with Outlaws

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 2.—It was reported here that Earl Y. Moseley, who pitched for the Boston American league team last season, has signed a contract to pitch for the Indianapolis Federal League team. Manager Phillips of the locals has put his staff for the 1914 season will be Falkenberg, Packard, Kaiserling, Billiard and the former Red Sox man.

"Busting 'Em" by TY COBB

Written exclusively for the Boston American by the greatest of all baseball players.

As I opined, Eddie Mack is a great manager in developing batters. The Athletics' leader is a close student of hitters and can measure their weakness and mend them out with infallible accuracy. Star hitters cannot be made, but a man with latent possibilities can be formed into a star under Mack tuition.

When Oldring first came to the Athletics he was laid on a curve ball, and Mack got after him until now Oldring has an around .300 year after year hitter. Bush has been greatly improved since he joined the Athletics. He corrected always the clinching sticker he is today.

This brings me to another thing. The great slugging of Baker in the world's series of 1911 and 1913 has led to many discussions of his weakness. Some experts declare he has not any "crosses." This may be true, but I know he is fond of a low ball. Dubuc, who carries one of the best slow balls I ever saw, can make Baker look foolish. That is the way he works for Detroit against Mack's club.

Baker Bites on the Slow Pitches.

The trouble with the giant pitchers was that they fed Baker speed—that is, they did until Mathewson, the greatest student of pitching that ever lived, discovered that Baker could not bite at a slow one. The Frapps slugger did not get many hits off the Giant star after that. But he inhales speed. He eats it, too. I happened to be standing near the New York bench in the fifth inning game of the world's series, and heard Matty talking to Marquard.

"Whatever you do," urged "Big Six," "don't hand Baker a fast one. Keep them slow curves and low."

But Marquard was so nervous he did not know what he was pitching when he got out there in the box and he slipped Baker a fast one on the inside, with the result that Baker pulled it into the right field stand for a home run.

Takes Advantage of Every Opportunity.

The first time I saw Eddie Collins play, which was in 1906, when he was appearing with the Athletics under the name of Eddie Sullivan and was still in college, he did not look like a hitter. Today he is probably the most dangerous in baseball, as his work in the last world's series showed. Collins is probably as valuable for more valuable to a team than Jackson or even Baker.

He is a wonderfully scientific batter and takes advantage of every flaw of the defence, driving the ball to left in the infield when a baseman goes to cover, and frequently outguessing the outfielders by placing his drives.

Collins also has unusual speed for a fast baseball player, and is quick to get to first ball safely to any part of the field. He is not phenomenal either, but he gets away with it. Mr. Collins is a student of baseball and has a method of his own. He guesses and he guesses right.

This is the style of many all good hitters. Speaker is a great mind reader on the opposite pitcher. I have already mentioned Cobb. These two depend largely on science for their averages, and both are users of the first water. Lajoie and Jackson do not play the batting game as closely. They are free swingers.

Lajoie also shuffles up to the plate as much as to say to the pitcher:

"Come and get here and see if you can get it by me."

I am constantly figuring on new ways to outguess the other man and add a bit or two to my style. Some of my best ideas have come to me at night just before I fall asleep, when, they say, great persons often come to their authors. I get up and write them down so I won't forget them the baseball ideas, not the poems.

The next installment of the Ty Cobb series of baseball stories will be published in the Boston AMERICAN on Wednesday.

Chapter XLIII.—Continued

"MUST have guessed who you were, too. Did you see how she looked at you? Thought I had brought you there to walk over her. I'm sure she did!"

There was another gust of laughter and then—

"She'd been going about saying I had married an old frump for the sake of her fortune, and when she saw that you could wipe her off the face of the earth without a gown that was worth wearing, she was ready to die with fury."

There was another gust of laughter through the smoke that was spurting from his mouth and then—

"And you, too, my dear! Laughing and applauding! She thought you were trying to crow over her! On her own particular hobby-horse, too! Upon my soul, it was too amusing. I wonder she didn't throw something at you. She's that when she's in her tantrums."

The waiter came in with the wine and my husband poured out a glass for me.

"Have a drink. No? Well, here's to your health, my dear. I can't get over it. I really can't. Lena's too funny for anything. Why, what else do you think she's been saying? She's been saying I'll come back to her yet. Yes, I'll give him six months to come crawling back to me,' she said to Eastcliff and Vivian and some of the other fellows at the Club. Wonder if she thinks so now? . . . I wonder?"

He threw away his cigarette, drank another glass of the wine, came close up to me and said in a lower tone, which made my skin creep as with cold:

"Whether she's right or wrong depends on you, though."

"On me?"

"Why, yes, of course. That's only natural. One may have all the goodwill in the world, but a man's a man, you know."

I felt my lips quivering with anger, and in an effort to control myself I rose to go, but my husband drew me back into my chair and sat on the arm of it.

"Don't go yet. By the way, dear, I've never thanked you for the beautiful flowers with which you decorated my room this morning. Charming! But I always knew you would soon come round to it."

"Come round to what?" I said, but it was just as if somebody else were speaking.

"You know. Of course you know. When that simple-old priest proposed that ridiculous compact I agreed, but I knew quite well that it would soon break down. Not on my side, though. Why should it? A man can afford to wait. But I felt sure you would soon tire of your resistance. And you have, haven't you. Oh, I'm no blind. I've seen what's been going on though I've said nothing about it."

COULD HAVE DIED

Again I tried to rise, and again my husband held me to my seat, saying:

"Don't be ashamed. There's no reason for that. You were rather hard on me, you know, but I'm going to forget all about it. Why shouldn't I? I've got the loveliest little woman in the world, so I mean to meet her half way, and she's going to get over her convent-bred ideas and be my dear little darling wife. Now isn't she?"

I could have died of confusion and the utter degradation of shame. To think that my poor efforts to please him, my fond attempts to look up to him and reverence him, my bankrupt appeals to the spiritual woman in me that I might bring myself to love him, as I thought it was my duty to do, should have been perverted by his gross and vulgar mind into overtures to the animal man in him—this was more than I could bear. I felt the tears gushing to my eyes, but I kept them back, for my self-pity was not so strong as my wrath.

I rose this time without being aware of his resistance.

"Let me go to bed," I said.

"Certainly! Most certainly, my dear, but . . . ."

"Let me go to bed," I said again, and at the next moment I stepped into my room.

He did not attempt to follow me. I saw in a mirror in front what was taking place behind me.

My husband was standing where I had left him with a look of amazement and then of rage.

"I can't understand you," he said. "Upon my soul I can't. There isn't a man in the world who could . . . ."

After that he strode into his own bedroom and clashed the door after him.

"Oh, what's the good?" I thought again.

It was impossible to make myself in love with my husband. It was no use trying.

Forty-fourth Chapter.

I MUST leave it to those who know better than I do the way to read the deep mysteries of a woman's heart, to explain how it came to pass that the result of this incident was to make me sure, that if we remained in London much longer my husband would go back to our other woman, and that my only way to keep him was to follow him. I should have become morally odious to myself were I to forget the terms of the compromise.

So be it was, for the very next morning I wrote to my father saying that I must unwell and begging him to let me be influenced with my husband to set out on the Egyptian trip without further delay.

My father's answer was prompt. What he had read between the lines of my letter I do not know, but in his own time:

"Daughter—Certainly. I am writing by same mail to Lena telling him to quit London quick. I guess you've been too long there already. And while you are away you can draw on me yourself for as much as you please, for where it is a matter of money you must never let nobody walk over you.

Yours—&c."

The letter to my husband produced an immediate result. Within twenty-four hours, the telephone was at work with inquiries about trains and berths on steamers, and within a week we were on our way to Marseilles to join the ship that was to take us to Port Said.

Our state-rooms were on the promenade deck of the steamer with a passage-way between them. This admitted of entirely separate existences, which was well, for knowing or guessing my share in our altered arrangements, my husband had become even more morose than before, and no conversation could be sustained between us.

FELT THE GULF

He spent a greater part of his time in his state-room, grumbling at the steward, abusing his valet, hauling his bad-tempered terrier and cursing the luck that had brought him on this senseless voyage.

More than ever now I felt the gulf that divided us. I could not pass a single hour with him in comfort. My life was becoming as cold as an empty house, and I was beginning to regret the eagerness with which I had removed my husband from a scene in which he had at least lived the life of a rational creature, when an unexpected event brought me a third of pleasure pleasure.

Our seats in the saloon were at the top of the doctor's table, and the doctor himself was a genial Irishman of three or four-and-forty, bright and breezy as a March morning and as easy of the soul as a new-born babe.

Hearing that I was from Ellan he greeted me with: "Sure I'm pleased to know Marvin Conrad."

Marvin Conrad. I repeated, feeling it hardly knew why as if some cold chill were falling over my limbs and veil were falling over my eyes.

"Yes, Mary Conrad, as we call him. The young man who has come out as doctor with lieutenant . . . ."

"He was the first of my boy friends—in fact the only one."

The young doctor's eyes twinkled and he looked as if he wanted to throw down his soup-spoon, jump up, and grasp me by both hands.

"God bless me, is that so?" he said.

It turned out that Martin and he had been friends at Dublin University. They had worked together, "rowed" together, and taken their degrees at the same time.

"So you know Mary," Lord alive, the way things come out!"

It was easy to see that Martin was not only his friend but his hero. He talked of him with a passionate love and admiration with which men, whatever they feel, rarely speak of each other.

Martin was the salt of the earth. He was the finest fellow and the staunchest friend and the bravest-hearted chap that walked under the stars of God.

"The greatest chum I have in the world, too, and by the Holy Immaculate Mother I'm destroyed at being away from him."

It was like music to hear him speak. A flood of joy went sweeping through me at every word of praise he gave to Martin. Am yet—I cannot explain why, unless it was the woman in me, the Irish woman, or perhaps the Celtic blood I began to depreciate Martin, in order to "boost" him on, so that he might say more on the same subject.

"Then he did take his degree," I said. "He was never very clever at his lessons, I remember, and I heard that he was only just able to scrape through his examinations."

The young doctor fell to my lead like a darling. With a flaming face and a nervous rush of racy words which made me think that if I closed my eyes I should be back on the steps of the church in Rome talking to Martin himself, he told me I was mistaken if I thought his friend was a numskull, for he had had "the biggest brain-pan in College Green," and the way he could learn things when he wanted to was wonderful.

HEART IN EXPLORING

He might be a bit shaky in his spelling, and perhaps he couldn't lick the world in Latin, but his heart was always in exploring, and the way he knew geography, especially the part of it they call the "Unknown," the Arctic, and the Antarctic, and what Charcot had done there, and Biscoe and Bellamy and D'Urville and Greely and Nansen and Shackleton and Peary, was enough to make the provost and professors look like fools of the earth by the side of him.

"Why, what do you think?" said the doctor. "When he went to London to apply for his billet the lieutenant said to him: 'You must have been down there before, young man.' 'No such luck,' said Martin. 'But you know as much about the Antarctic already as the whole boiling of us put together,' said the lieutenant. 'Yes, by St. Patrick and St. Thomas, he's a geographer any way.'

I admitted that much, and to encourage the doctor to go on I told him where I had seen Martin last, and what he had said of his expedition.

"In Rome you say?" said the doctor, with a note of jealousy. "You beat me there then. I saw him off from London, though. A few of us Dublin boys, being in town at the time, went down to Tilbury to see him sail, and when they were lifting anchor and the tug was hitching on we stood on the pier—fifteen strong —and set up some of our college songs. 'Sing your rousing, boys,' said he, 'the lieutenant will be hearing you.' But not a bit of it. We sang and sang as long as the tug was going out with the tide, and then we went back in the train, smoking our pipes like so many Vauxhall chimneys, and never a word out of the one of us.

Yes, yes, there are some men like that. They come like the stars of night and go like the light of heaven. Same as there are some women who walk the world like the sun, and leave the grass growing green wherever their feet have trod.

It was very ridiculous; I did not understand why it should be so, but the tears came gushing into my eyes while the doctor spoke, and it was as much as I could do to preserve my composure.

My last interpretation my husband put upon my emotion I do not know, but I saw that his face darkened, and when the doctor turned to him to ask if he also knew Martin he answered curtly and brusquely:

"No! I. No loss either, I should say."

"No loss!" said the doctor. "Show me the man under the stars of God that's fit to hold a candle to Martin Conrad, and by the angel Gabriel all go fifty miles out of my way to put a sight on him."

More than ever after this talk about Martin Conrad I was feeling defenceless and at the mercy of my husband's wishes and whims, when something happened which seemed to change his character altogether.

The third day out, on a bright and quiet morning, we called at Malta, and while my husband went ashore to visit some friends in the garrison, I sat on deck watching the life of the little port and looking at the big warships anchored in the bay.

A Maltese woman came on board to sell souvenirs of the island, and picking out of her tray a tiny twisted thing in coral, I asked what it was.

"That's a charm, my lady," said the woman.

"A charm for what?"

"To make my lady's husband love her."

I felt my face becoming crimson, but my heart was sore, so in my simplicity I bought the charm and was smuggling it into my bag when I became aware that one of my fellow-passengers, a lady, was looking down at me.

She was a tall, singularly handsome woman, fashionably and although on shipboard almost sumptuously dressed. A look in her face was disarming me with a necessity I could not fix when she stooped and said:

"Aren't you Mary O'Neill?"

The voice completed the identification, and I knew who it was. It was Alma Lier.

She was now about seven-and-twenty and in the prime of her young womanhood. Her beautiful auburn hair lay low over her broad forehead, almost descending to her long sable-colored eyebrows. Her cheeks were very white under the whiteness of nature, I thought), and her lips were more than commonly red, with the upper one a little thin and the lower slightly set forward. But her eyes were still her distinguishing feature, being larger and blacker than before and having that vivid gaze that looked through and through you and made you feel that few women and no man in the world would have the power to resist her.

The Gold Witch

Being the Adventures of a Golden-Haired Heiress

No. 12—Blessings, Like Sorrows, Never Come Singly

By STELLA FLORES

EVEN in the whirl of happiness that followed her meeting Tom again, the tender heart of the little Gold Witch could not forget her old guardian, Tom's father, old and alone in his great house with sad memories.

And when at last Tom brought her, a bride, to a tiny new apartment as dainty as a jewel box, she crept into his arms and confessed she had written to his father. "I told him we could just keep on being disinherited, dear, but that you long for your father, and I just must have my dearest 'Guardy' again. You aren't angry, are you?"

"Angry at you?" chided Tom. "But it's no use. He won't come."

AS he spoke there was a knock, and in the doorway stood—Tom's father. With a delighted little cry the Gold Witch flew to him, and Tom silently gripped his hand. The old man looked down tenderly at the lovely flushed face, with its cobwebby gold hair wreathed in orange blossoms and lace.

"My children," he said in a voice that would tremble in spite of him. "Years and the Gold Witch's father and I learned that wealth was only a trust. So we decided to keep it from you till you learned its value. But I do not know any one who could use it more wisely than my two children, who have proved they can make their own way so well."

True Story of Boston's Little Lost Sister Who Found Herself

By JANET WRIGHT.

CHAPTER XIX.—Continued

I WENT first to the office of the Clerk of Courts, and learned that Joe's divorce suit had never been pressed—that he failed to appear when its turn came upon the docket. After that, there was nothing save to advertise for him—appeal to him to return to me.

QUEST BEGUN

I began my quest by inserting "personal" advertisements in the New York and Chicago papers—for I believed it unlikely that Joe had remained within range of the Boston papers. It was an expensive campaign, but I had saved a deal of money—and I was ready to give it all to find Joe for Janet. It is a curious thing that in all the months I was hunting for him, it never occurred to me to ask—"What will happen if you find him?" Subconsciously, I suppose there was the belief that we would be married—yet I never stopped to think out this question—to ask myself whether I was ready to marry Joe.

After a month of advertising in New York and Boston, I decided to take a new tack. This was my reasoning: That Joe would not have gone to a large city, but to one of the middle class—one to two hundred thousand—I thought it even possible that he had gone to the farming country of the West and taken up land there, for it was in the homesteading days that he had left Boston.

Along this line, I went to an agency and secured a list of representative papers. To them, one after the other, I sent my advertisement. This was the way it was worded:

"Joe—Your daughter is a young woman now. She is named—after me—Janet. Address Boston."

At first I had planned to use his full name—"Joe Hobart"—but decided this would be unfair to him, and so for three months longer I covered the whole western part of the country with these advertisements.

By and by, my paragraph came to the notice of an advertising agency in Chicago; and the manager wrote me a letter with this suggestion:

"We believe we can help you if you will give us the chance to place your advertisements, and a few facts about yourself. Most papers are glad to print such a story as apparently lies behind your advertisement, if it is brought to the attention of the news department—especially if an advertisement is inserted at the same time."

I was beginning to be discouraged when this letter came to me; and the suggestion heartened me more than can be imagined. I wrote to the agency, complying with their suggestion, and sent fundamental facts in the case, without naming Joe.

This agency went to work, using the following method. They would enclose my advertisement—written by some girl in their office—and with it would enclose a pitiful letter, purporting to come from me, telling my story.

Nine times out of ten the paper was glad to print the letter. But it was an amazing chance that at last brought my appeal to Joe's eyes.

* * *

Joe Hobart, as a boy in his twenties, left me in Boston and went to Springfield, where he worked there a month—and with the money thus earned went to Rochester. His next jump was to Toledo, and then to Chicago.

He worked in Chicago for a year—as a hardware clerk in a big department store. At the end of that time, Joe had acquired some ideas. One was that a lot of people came into the store asking if there was any tool made to do a certain common-place bit of gardening. There was such a tool for farm work—horse-drawn. Joe got to thinking, and eventually devised and patented a little hand tool that would do the same thing in a small garden.

MADE MONEY FAST

He took this patent and the money he had saved, had a stock of the tools made by a machinist on contract, and then started to sell them about the Chicago suburbs. They went almost at sight—it was only necessary to find the men of the house at home. Joe made money—made it rapidly. Five years after he left me, he was manufacturing himself—this first tool, and other handy little garden novelties.

In ten years he was wealthy. His plant was established in a little town just outside the effective range of the Chicago newspapers. He employed half the men in the town, and it was inevitable that he should get into politics. Thus he made enemies—and one of them was the publisher of the little daily paper in the town.

One day Joe picked up this paper to read this headline:

"Deserted woman begs her 'Joe' to come back."

Alongside it was another:

"Joe' Hobart still grinds laborers."

"Came here seventeen years ago."

It was the "deadly parallel" with a vengeance. Below was my story—and the story of Joe's career—which began superiously just eighteen years before. Joe was a fighter; and his first impulse was to thrash the editor. His next was to take the train East. Two days later he arrived in Boston.

* * *

Neither my name nor address had accompanied the story which Joe's enemy had seized upon with almost uncanny intuition, to injure Joe. And so my old sweetheart came to Boston with no idea of where or how to find me. He tried the police, tried my old boarding house where he had last seen me, tried the store where I had worked, and even made a trip to my home in New Hampshire, where at last he got my address. This consumed a week. In five minutes he could have found my name in the directory—but he failed to look there. It never occurred to him. He got my address from the people at home, and took the train to Boston the night with his heart full of longing—and of fear. My message had told him I wanted to see him; my word of "his daughter" had set him trembling with wonder and eagerness, for he had never known of Janet's birth.

It was late at night when he reached Boston, and he decided to postpone coming to me till the next day.

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

Johnny Jones, the office boy, was discovered detected in a lie. It was one of the ordinary prevarications of the everyday world, and moreover, to the office force more or less habituated in adhering to his original declarations statements.

"You good, for my lad," added a fatherly cleric in a kindly tone, "you must always be honest with the truth."

"Aye, was the assistant treasurer, "honesty is the best policy when they grow up."

At breakfast restless little Tommy began to chat with the cruel stand of his dad, who, due to the ex-pected, insisted, and at last upset and spilled the pepper on the table cloth.

"Now, Tommy," said his father, "you've disobeyed and upset the pepper caster, and I really ought to give the punishment fit the crime."

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were lower in most instances this afternoon. In New York the market was weakened to some extent by London selling of Americans and Canadian Pacific. A few issues sustained substantial losses on this side. Canadian Pacific was off 1¾, American Telephone 1, Rock Island common 3 and preferred 2¾. The list had a declining tendency during the noon hour. There were fractional recessions for Southern Pacific, Reading, Consolidated, Baltimore & Ohio and Union Pacific. Steel showed steadiness under pressure.

At the opening the tone of the Boston market was fairly firm, but business was not particularly active. Prices remained irregular all the morning. American Telephone was the busiest of prominent stocks. Two strong coppers were Granby and Osceola. By afternoon Granby was up 2¾ and Osceola 1¼. Issues to show considerable losses were Boston & Maine and American Telephone. The Boston Elevated, which was ex-dividend $2, sold at 95, having closed Saturday at 94½.

OPENED AT A DECLINE.

At the opening New York prices ranged a little lower, the list being irregular and with a narrow range, but the greatest losses were fractions. For a time the trend was uncertain. The slump in Rock Island issues, both common and preferred, falling more than two points, had an unsettling effect. American Telephone also showed a rough break. Rock Islands were under pressure because of doubts as to the road's ability to easily meet its bonds. The Burleson suggestion in regard to government ownership of telephone and telegraph wire was adverse to Telephone. In the second hour the market developed strength. Rock Island improving and preferred regaining more than a point of its early loss. But American Telephone continued to weaken. Smelting, Consolidated, Mexican Petroleum, Reading and other issues were in more demand and advanced.

COPPER SHARES FIRMER.

Copper shares were benefited by the rise in copper warrants in London and the decrease in foreign visible supplies revealed by fortnightly statistics.

It is said that metal has sold at 13¾ cents a pound and that consumers in this country have renewed buying. If, which is a good sign not only for this particular trade but in regard to the business outlook in general. One estimate of sales last month is that the total amounted to 120,000,000 pounds. Europe taking most of it for January and March delivery.

By noon Amalgamated, Anaconda, Chino and Utah were fractionally higher, but American Smelting had declined. White more stocks were showing fractional losses, a number of issues were still notably weak. Among Canadian Pacific fell 1¾, American Telephone and Western Union. Among the industrials to show large declines were American Car and Foundry and American Tobacco. Trading was of good volume during the morning. The call rate was 2 per cent.

LONDON NOT A HELP.

London was not a helpful influence to New York during the forenoon, most Americans being irregular in the former market. But the price range was narrow there. The situation in Europe continued to be encouraging, however, and it is expected that the Bank of Germany will this week follow the example of the Bank of England and the Bank of France and reduce its minimum discount rate. It was cabled from Berlin to Hearst newspapers that German speculators are in a sanguine mood because of the splendid success of the subscription to the Prussian loan. Home government securities have been heavily bought under the stimulus of a very sixty-one-fold covering of the Prussian treasury notes, and have registered remarkable gains. Home industrial issues also advanced strongly, although little news was forthcoming to encourage the bulls.

COPPER WARRANTS ADVANCE.

The London copper warrants market was strong this morning, and at noon spot was up 17s. 6d. and futures 15s. higher.

Fortnightly statistics state that to-day the foreign visible copper supply in England, France and afloat (Europe) was 16,850 tons, a decrease of 2,217 tons in two weeks. Visible supplies at Hamburg, Antwerp and Havre were 9,195 tons, an increase of 44 tons since January 15.

A cablegram from London says the Amalgamated and Hirsh agencies are reported to have sold the sale of 1½ cents a pound, an advance of ¼ while the American smelting agency is asking 14¾.

Copper exported from this country in January last totalled 50,000 tons. The January, 1912, total was 52,000.

month the offerings of railroad bonds were only one-third of the volume in January, 1913. Sales of all classes of railroad securities totaled only $73,536,000, or less than half the corresponding figure a year ago. Such conditions could not last long without entailing financial and transportation embarrassments.

Abnormal refunding of maturing short date notes and bonds impends. Will the market absorb a huge outpouring of long-term bonds? Many factors and influences are favorable.

January has brought a complete transformation in monetary conditions. Developments have included:

1—Reductions, to very low levels, in foreign banks rates.

2—Extensive accumulations of idle funds in New York and other American centres.

WILL NEW ISSUES BE WELL ABSORBED?

3—Extraordinary rise in British consols, overwhelming subscriptions for Prussian government loans and the successful flotation of other obligations abroad, in contrast with repeated failures of previous issues.

4—Large release of hoarded money on the European continent.

A sharp rise in quotations and unwonted activity on home stock exchanges culminated in a boom in sea buying.

5—Positive outburst of confidence in the administration's avowed intentions not to deal harmfully with business.

But the picture has two sides. Restraining influences include:

—Mexico.

—Transition to new currency system.

5—Probability of extensive gold exports to Paris.

6—Unnecessarily severe railroad rate decision.

7—Action, over certain proposed laws at Washington, notably the taxes bill to bring stock exchanges under the corporation tax.

WALL STREET NOW FEELS CONFIDENT.

Wall Street, cheered by the "January rise," is confident. It looks for an advancing, active stock market, a broader demand for bonds and an early return of business prosperity.

In its present mood, the financial community expects none of the unfavorable possibilities to occur.

And admittedly the whole situation has undergone marked change for the better since 1914 opened. The public is described as "excellent," the feeling supply of stocks and gilt-edged bonds is light, the public are entering the market, and deposit companies must find some outlet for the large sums of funds from the country.

It's my own part, while leaning toward cautiousness, I cannot follow Wall Street all the way.

Money, now at new security quotations, will move much farther once the new offerings fall thick and fast upon the market. To despite many the terms of the forthcoming refunding must of necessity be attractive. This will mean competition for available capital.

And I consider that while lenders are willing to rent their funds to stock exchange and commercial borrowers, they are clamoring for gilt-edged securities, except in the highest grades of credit.

Since the bulk of unavoidable offerings has been absorbed, and once the new currency machinery has been put into smooth running order, the world will have been opened—given a new lease—for commercial expansion—for the profitable employment of both financial and industrial capital. Those will have been through during the first twelve months.

Big Mills to Run on Extra Time

HARTFORD, Ct., Feb. 2—Indications that the new tariff is not acting as a serious menace to the woolen manufacturing business, at least as far as Connecticut is concerned, are found in the announcements affecting two of the largest mills in this part of the State.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

The Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are purely vegetable, this combination set to tone liver and bowels—acting with such gentleness that the user feels it. Simply use these little sugar-coated tablets. Those famous little tablets that have relieved down, but have so fully established their fame that they are now the largest selling liver medicine in the world, strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and help correct it. They act on the liver at the expense of the tonsil, and sometimes place bacon with the gums, so that nothing from constipation can be calomel, but by Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets to tone your liver and clear your skin. Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "brighten" the eyes. At 10c and 25c per box. The olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. All druggists.

Fact and Comment in Business World

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

American corporations issued only $139,000,000 capital bonds and short term notes in January, a decrease of $68,813,000 from last year's figure.

But now that money has become plentiful both in Europe and here the flood gates are to be opened. New flotations during the next months will probably break all records—provided no adverse ruling be given in the railroad rate case.

Shall We, by Any Chance, Have Trouble with Japan?

An Interesting, Serious Question. It Ought to Make the Peace Gentlemen Sit Up Straight for a Moment.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

It is difficult to believe that our interesting brown friends in Japan would commit national hari-kari.

There are intelligent men among them. They must know the difference between the United States and Russia.

They know, for instance, that there is more real fighting power in the State of Texas or Illinois or New York than the whole of Russia.

And they must understand that in Russia they dealt with a people fighting against its government, whereas here they would deal with a people fighting WITH THEIR GOVERNMENT. There would be no chance of anything but defeat for Japan.

However, Asiatics are not Europeans.

And little brown men who have beaten half-dead China and revolutionary Russia may perhaps imagine that they could beat the citizens, the gunners and the HISTORY of the United States.

Recent messages from Japan are very interesting.

The Foreign Minister has said with bitter emphasis that the United States has "ignored Japan's third protest" against the California Land act.

Of course, the Japanese are not aware as a nation that Mr. Bryan, our Secretary of State, was lecturing with the Tyrolean yodlers when he ought to have been attending to foreign affairs.

Perhaps when they learn officially that the yodlers are put away for the Winter and that the Secretary can attend to them, matters may cool down.

But there is some reason to believe that matters WILL NOT COOL DOWN, AND THAT WE MAY PERHAPS HAVE REAL TROUBLE WITH THE JAPANESE. It would be serious trouble—most serious for them, of course, but stupidity and brutality serious for ourselves as well.

The Japanese Foreign Minister, complaining of the failure of the United States to answer the Japanese complaint, used this language:

"The replies of the United States government were not found satisfactory, and the Imperial government has come to see the necessity of considering some other ways for a solution of the question."

That is the diplomatic way of saying the Imperial government has decided that the United States must be COMPELLED to let the Japanese say what laws we shall make regarding our own land.

Needless to say the Japanese government will wake up in a surprised condition sooner or later if she persists in her desire to help us to manage this country.

California has said that she does not want her land OWNED by Japanese.

She does not want her territory colonized BY THE JAPANESE.

California will not have the Japanese, will not let them colonize, will not let them own land, AND THE WHOLE OF THE UNITED STATES WILL BACK UP CALIFORNIA IN THIS RESOLUTION.

This country is not to become Asiatic.

The Japanese may be industrious, intelligent, patient and marvellously successful. BUT THEY CANNOT PERFORM THEIR MIRACLES ON UNITED STATES TERRITORY. That territory is for the race to which it belongs.

The principal ally of the Japanese is Great Britain.

The difference between Great Britain and the United States IS THAT THE UNITED STATES SAYS FRANKLY WHAT IT MEANS.

We say to the Japanese, "You can't own land; you may come here to study, but not to live OR LABOR. We have all kinds of regard for you—just as we have for the people on the planet Mars. But we think that you belong to another world, and we intend that you shall stay there, FOR THE PRESENT AT LEAST."

The English, having an offensive and defensive alliance with Japan, are a little more circumspect and polite. They do not say that Japanese shall not own land in Canada. But they "reserve the right to send away anybody with whom the Canadian climate would not agree."

They say that the Canadian climate does not agree with the Japanese, or with the coolies from India—and they send them away on that pretext.

Of course, the Canadian climate does agree with the Japanese. The Canadians, however, exclude him as we do—a little more politely.

California has taken the right stand in her blunt statement that she doesn't want the Japanese, won't have them and won't let them buy her land.

The question is, what is to come out of the situation?

What will the Congress of the United States do in the way of preparing for possible foolish action by Japan?

When will the Congress of the people of the United States realize that the most extravagant folly in the world IS LACK OF ADEQUATE PREPARATION?

The Fate of Crassus

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

IN the year B. C. 53, in what is now Asiatic Turkey, was fought one of the decisive battles of history. At Carrhae the Parthians killed a Roman pro-consul, annihilated a Roman army and precipitated the rivalry between the two Roman citizens which was to end in the overthrow of the republic and in the overthrow of the empire.

And all this was brought about by a lot of semi-barbarous nomads, who, as the Romans thought, had no military ability whatever and were not even worthy of serious consideration.

Crassus, who, with Caesar and Pompey, formed the "first triumvirate," being ambitious of renown and desirous of increasing his store of worldly goods, set out with an army of 50,000 men to conquer the Parthians. He thought the job would be an easy one. The legions were invincible, and while they had never as yet met the Sons of the Desert, no fear was felt as to the outcome of the expedition.

Striking boldly into the desert, Crassus came up with the enemy a little to the eastward of the Euphrates and there began at once one of the most remarkable fights of history. The Parthian force, composed entirely of cavalry, formed about the Romans in a circle, which was slowly drawn tighter and tighter as the struggle wore on. Riding close up to the legionaries, the Parthians would rain their deadly arrows upon them and then suddenly ride away. The Romans charged with splendid courage, but they might as well have charged the wind or the flying clouds of heaven. Closer and closer drew the death circle and thinner grew the legions. On the one side there was no surrender and on the other no mercy. Slowly but remorselessly the work of destruction went on, and presently Crassus was dead and his army annihilated.

The "Parthian arrow" did its work well, and the ghost of the dead army, flitting back to Rome, made the Masters of the World shiver to the very marrow in their bones. That ghost was doubly significant.

In-Shoots

When the following begins to shrink the leaders of the new political party will generally yell louder than ever.

It is possible to be sorry for one's creditors and still not be able to settle up.

Spirit of Song

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

DEAR voice that comes to thrill my heart,
Murmuring gay or mournful song;
When you are near each day seems bright
And none too long.
But when you go from out my heart,
Though joys may come in happy throng,
Somehow my eyes are blind to light,
And right seems wrong.
Spirit of Song—stay in my heart!
Let my ears hear your happy voice;
For when you sing the dark seems bright,
And I rejoice.

Mr. Taft tells Secretary Bryan that talking aids digestion. If that's so, Mr. Bryan must be a walking pepsin tablet.

It's perfectly evident that the Japanese don't consider the California land question settled. They have just appropriated $80,000,000 for new dreadnoughts.

Governor Blease of South Carolina pardons a negro convict on the grounds that he was indescribably tortured by white guards. Tee, but what about the guards?

Let Wives Earn Money as Well as Husbands

Only a Silly, Idiotic Custom Forbids a Woman to Help Her Husband in That Way, if She Wishes. The Next Generation Will Abolish Such Antiquated Ideas.

By DORO THY DIX

A NICE young man of my acquaintance is engaged to be married to a nice young woman. The only rift in the lut is caused by the lack of money. The young man is earning at the present time only a thousand dollars a year. Obviously they can't marry on that without taking undue chances at having the wolf at the door for a watchdog.

The young woman, however, is a business girl, and she also gets a thousand dollars a year for salary, and she and the young man, being practical, modern young people, see no reason on earth why they shouldn't get married, and she keep on with her job, thus doubling the family income, and enabling them to live in comfort until such time as the man is able to make enough for the two of them.

The obstacle in carrying out this plan is the girl's father, who is horrified at the thought of his daughter following a gainful occupation after she is married, and who says that a man should have sufficient love for his young wife and sufficient pride to keep her in her own home.

So the little heart tragedy goes on. The young people, who dearly love each other, can't get married because the young man can't command a big enough salary to feed and clothe two people.

The girl goes on working, but she is not permitted to buy her happiness with her money, and all because of a silly old convention that binds us and fetters our freedom, and from which we ought to have enough courage to break away.

Among people in moderate circumstances a condition of affairs has arisen that we have got to face, and that is that the average young man does not make enough money to support a wife. If he waits to marry until he is able to comfortably provide for a family he has gotten to be an old bachelor who is too selfish to marry at all, or who is so full of whims, and crochets, and cranks that no woman wants him.

This is hard on the girls, and it is hard for posterity and society in general, for the time that people ought to marry is in the Spring time of life, when they are full of hope, and enthusiasm, and romance, and adaptability.

To say to any young couple that they must wait through dreary years while the bloom of their affection is rubbed off, and the glory and the circling wings fade away from their romance, because convention decrees that a woman shall be shut up in her house when she works after marriage, is not only idiotic, it is a crime.

For the only way in this day and under present economic conditions that the poor young man and his sweetheart can venture into matrimony is by pooling their pay envelopes and both continuing to earn money.

And why shouldn't they, pray?

The father, who is so shocked at the idea of his daughter earning money to help her husband outside of the home, would think that she was doing no more than her duty by working to help him within the home. If she married a poor man he would expect her to do her part by doing the cooking and washing and ironing and scrubbing and sewing. He would think it all right for her husband to accept this strenuous labor from the girl.

Her profession only occupies her from 9 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon, with an hour off for lunch, whereas if she did the cooking and washing for a family she would be hard at it from 5 o'clock in the morning until 8 in the evening.

Moreover, her work calls for no great physical exertion, and is carried on in a handsomely furnished office amid congenial surroundings and brings her in contact with pleasant and intelligent people that keep her mind agreeably stimulated.

If she did her own housework she would be at hard labor, bending over a washboard or a gas range. Her hands would be sodden and rough and she would spend her time doing over and over a dreary round of monotonous duties, with no companionship, nobody with whom to exchange thoughts and ideas, and keep her keyed up to her highest intelligence.

Which way of helping her husband is the easier, the more agreeable, the one that the girl would choose herself? Yet the custom has demanded that the woman take the harder end, and held that it reflected on her and the man if she went on with the work that she had fitted herself to do and turned the money she made into the family exchequer instead of turning in the labor of her hands.

It's an antiquated idea, that doesn't fit into our scheme of modern life, and the sooner we realize it the better.

Learn to Master the "Tongue"

By ELBERT HUBBARD

ISRAEL ZANGWILL once visited the city of Chicago. Among other places of interest he was taken to the stockyards, where luncheon was served for the party. During the meal a pert miss, seated next to the guest of honor, asked him this question: "Mr. Zangwill, how do you like Chicago ham?"

The Dreamer of the Ghetto raised his sorrowful face and said quietly, "I like it, I like it—much better than Chicago tongue!"

Too much tongue is a bad thing.

When we recall that some of the best and noblest who have ever lived have been reviled and traduced, indicted and executed, by so-called good men—certainly men who were sincere—how can we open our hearts to tales of discredit?

The entire Salem witchcraft insanity was nothing but a bad case of scandal. Much of the martyrdom and bloodshed of the past can be traced directly to the same cause. Nations have gone to war because some princeling has charged that a king stuck his tongue in his cheek and bit his thumb when another king was mentioned.

One peculiarity of scandal is that when it is passed along from one person to another it takes on pinmanes. The original remark, uttered in a certain circle, may have been utterly devoid of poison; but when the repetition comes, in a different atmosphere, to different hearers, told by another man, the wit that once disinfected the thing is gone and we have only dead, stale, tainted, unprofitable stuff.

And so you see how a person who repeats an unkind remark is probably doing a much greater mischief than the one who first voiced it. The man who repeats the story, and thus retails the poison, fails to supply the antidote. Let his name be anathema.

• • •

A ludicro-tragic feature of "tongue" is that those who deal in it most always are full of grievances and wails, because, they allege, other folks are talking about them. Indeed, this is their excuse for the constant use of the hammer—that some one is "knocking on them." They mistake the sound of their own hammers for that of others. Any man who plots another's undoing is digging his own grave.

All those plotters of the French Revolution who worked the guillotine in double shifts were at last dragged to the scaffold and pushed under the knife.

The hate we now finds lodgement in our hearts and the crop is nettles that fate unrelentingly demands we gather.

Those who live by the hammer shall perish by the hammer.

If you work in a department store, a bank, a railroad office, a factory, I beg of you, do not knock. Speak ill of no one, and listen to no idle tales. Whether the bitter things told are true or not, has no bearing on the issue. To repeat an unkind truth is just as bad as to invent a lie. If some one has spoken ill of me, do not be so foolish as to hope to curry favor by telling me of it.

And of this never for a moment doubt that the man who successfully manages a great railroad, bank, factory or other enterprise, in one who neither listens to or bears tales to any person of what this one says or does. He treats all with courtesy and fairness, and like the great and loving Lincoln, when his generals were accused, deducts seventy-five per cent. from every accusation and throws the remainder in the waste basket. Actions alone count.

Men who conspire and plot, and who lend a ready ear to the idea of a strike, are marked on every time-book for dismissal when the hour is ripe. And whenever you find a man who spends half of his time looking for a job you can rest assured that he is one who carries a large cargo of "tongue."
